REFLECTION ON TODAY'S GOSPEL READING: John 6.24-35

In today's Gospel the crowd, who have witnessed the multiplication of loaves and fishes, ask for a sign as if the multiplication was nothing much. Jesus puts his Father above Moses and by implication his word (teaching) above that of Moses. The crowd interprets the whole discussion in material terms and so misinterprets what he says. The people were sure about what they wanted, clear about how God had worked in the past; they had a template and they wanted to see whether Jesus fitted it.

We sometimes approach Jesus in the same way, asking for what we need, expecting a particular answer. Jesus wants to open our hearts to receive what God is offering; we need to open our eyes to recognise it. (www.sacredspace.ie)

Eleventh Sunday after Pentecost (August 8)) John 6.35, 45--51

In today's Gospel passage, Jesus teaches that his Father draws one to believe and that those who believe in Him (Jesus) have everlasting life. He reiterates the point that he is the bread of life from heaven, and that those who eat this bread (listen to and accept his word) will not die.

We were created for nothing in this world. Jesus is constantly pointing us beyond this world to the Father, promising to 'raise us up on the last day', offering us eternal life. All this is our destiny. It is not some kind of 'reward' for this life, added on, but organically linked to this life and how we live now. We grow towards this new way of living through Jesus.
