REFLECTION ON TODAY'S GOSPEL READING: Mark 3.20-35

The message is sent in: "Your mother and brothers and sisters are outside asking for you." To which Jesus replies, "Who are my mother and my brothers?" And pointing to those sitting at his feet listening to his teaching, he says, "Here are my mother and my brothers." And he clarifies that further by adding, "Anyone who does the will of God, that person is my brother and sister and mother."

We should note that Jesus' family is described twice as being on the "outside". They are "outsiders". By implication, those sitting in a circle with Jesus are on the "inside"; they are the "insiders".

What Jesus is clearly saying is that being on the "inside" is not just a question of location but of relationship. That relationship is not by blood but by identification with the Way of Jesus. To be a Christian is to enter into a new family, with stronger ties than those of blood and where everyone is seen as a brother or a sister. The "insider" is defined simply as "anyone who does the will of God".

REFLECTION FOR THIRD SUNDAY AFTER PENTECOST MARK 4.26-34 (June 13)

The news that the Kingdom of God was among us was the principal news that Jesus brought. This is the Good News of the Gospel. It is the news that our God is not remote and removed from us in some distant sphere. Instead, God is in our midst, active in our daily lives, offering us gifts of freedom and fullness of life. The question we might ask ourselves is - am I ready to allow the reign of God in my own life? Can I welcome God and the gifts of God, and offer God the greatest gift that I can give - my trust? Am I ready and willing to allow God to transform me.
